LITTLE HISTORY OF WHISKY

They were the Celts who knew how to distill barley and rye. The beverage obtained was considered a gift from their gods that revived the dead and heated during winter. Actually, in Gaelic, whiskey is called “Uisge Beatha” or “Water of Life”

DID YOU KNOW THAT?

The town of Cognac is one of the three regions with designation of European origin to produce brandy. The other two are Armagnac and Jerez de la Frontera. There is widespread confusion between brandy and cognac. Brandy is a type of drink, while cognac is a type of brandy that comes from the Cognac region in France, which has a specific process for both distillation (must be distilled twice) and selection of grapes their production.

Hippocras Vine popular drink in the Middle Ages it has as main ingredients honey & wine

LITTLE ABOUT DIGESTIVES

In the Middle Ages, when alcohol was still reserved for medical purposes, was taken after meals, a drink made with wine, sugar and spices: hippocras. At that time it was thought that the spices helped digestion and sugar is considered a medicine. The hippocras or wine hippocras was a popular drink in the Middle Ages throughout Europe well come the eighteenth century, it had as main ingredients honey
